

COVID-19 “Shelter-in-Place” Response

We Remain Open For Business With Modified Procedures

Despite the current reality of social distancing, our office remains open for business and available to assist you with your estate planning, trust administration, probate, and other needs. We have adapted our practices to help protect the health and well-being of our clients, staff, and community.

How Can We Help You Protect Yourself And Your Family?

Many people think of estate planning as a means by which you can arrange for the distribution of your property to your beneficiaries after your death, while avoiding the costly and time-consuming process of administering your estate through the probate court. While this is true, an equally important goal of estate planning is to provide authorization and direction for trusted individuals to manage your finances, pay your bills, and make medical decisions on your behalf if you become unable to do so because of a medical crisis or incapacity.

Our office can help you to create or update your Will, Trust, Durable Power of Attorney, Advance Health Care Directive, and other related documents. We can do this while promoting social distancing through the use of remote consultations and alternative document signing procedures.

In addition, should you require assistance with trust administration, probate, or other related services, we remain available to assist you.

Remote Consultations

Our office is now conducting remote consultations through online video conferencing, document sharing, and phone meetings to allow us to continue to serve your needs. As always, there is no charge for initial phone consultations.

Document Signing

Many documents may be printed and signed remotely by our clients, and then emailed, mailed, or faxed to our office. For documents that require a notary public or witnesses, alternative approaches will be used which range from very minimal contact to no in-person contact. Please call our office and we will work to develop a solution that meets your specific needs.
